*Becoming the Instrument of Change:
Teaching Communication with Conscious Interacting*

6:30 PM-8:30 PM
Thursday, August 7
Rend Lake College Theatre
Worth 2 hours of Continuing Education

Many disabilities impact interpersonal communication. Sometimes communication programs are missing an important component: teaching the communicative partners how to respond in a way that encourages more communication. This workshop teaches participants to be conscious of their roles in developing communication in people with autism or other communication, intellectual or developmental issues. Learn useful communication variety, effective non-verbal skills, responsiveness strategies, recognizing underlying messages, structured waiting, and teaching important communication skills that support people across their lifetimes.

Mental Health is essential for successful life outcomes. But what is mental health? Is it simply the absence of mental illness or is it something more? The World Health Organization defines mental health in this way: "Mental health is not just the absence of mental disorder. It is defined as a state of well-being in which every individual realizes his or her own potential, can cope with the normal stresses of life, can work productively and fruitfully, and is able to make a contribution to her or his community." Mental health is our goal for every person.

Barbara T. Doyle is a nationally known teacher, consultant, trainer, presenter and author. She is known for her passionate approach to presenting practical and realistic solutions for everyday issues at home, school, work and social situations. She is an interesting and engaging presenter who keeps her audiences thinking and moving. Her "ready to apply" information is delivered with humor and humanity. Her more than 41 years of professional experience add to her life experiences as a family member of five people with disabilities. Barbara's mission is to make the world a more inclusive place for everyone by increasing understanding, creating a truly accessible service delivery system and promoting effective teaching, adaptations and accommodations.

Barbara is the president and CEO of Barbara T. Doyle, MS, Inc. which she incorporated almost 15 years ago. In her private practice, Barbara educates and supports schools, families, child welfare systems, adult services agencies, employment training programs, mental health programs, employers, and others who are interested in improving the lives of people with autism spectrum disorders and other disabilities. She has a deep understanding of sensory impairments and autism at both a personal and professional level. Barbara is fluent in sign language and highly skilled in non-verbal communication methods.
